

[42] The common law of Australia recognises a form of native title which reflects the entitlement of the indigenous inhabitants to their traditional lands.

[43] Native title has its origin in the traditional laws acknowledged by the indigenous inhabitants of a territory.

The second page carries a short passage on unjust enrichment.

A restitutionary claim responds to the defendant's enrichment.